Superintendent’s Message

Schools are doing wonderful things in Camden County. Our students routinely surpass expectations because of the efforts of our teachers and those who support them. Every employee in Camden County contributes to a highly effective school system we can be proud of but we must remember, the adage “If you aren’t moving ahead you’re falling behind” is brutally truthful in education. The responsibility we share as a community to ensure students reach higher and achieve more dictates a relentless approach to improvement. Fortunately, our pursuit of continuous improvement in Camden County requires evolutionary rather than revolutionary change because teachers have proven their will and competence time and time again to help students succeed. I hope the entire community will join us in efforts to develop and implement strategies that continue to improve student achievement and success.

Support for greater gains is dependent on community confidence that overshadows pessimism and surpasses even the highest expectations. Demonstrating unity and a singleness of purpose among those associated with education in Camden County will reassure parents that the development and growth of their child supersedes all other pursuits. Adopting a unified process for continuous improvement will illustrate a strategic method for identifying critical issues that hinder student success, strategies that yield results for children, and a plan for implementation that keeps stakeholders involved.

As superintendent I pledge to work every day so that every child fortunate enough to pass through the halls of Camden County Schools will be motivated, challenged and inspired to reach their maximum potential.
